OBJECTIVE

Fort Pitt Capital Group's Dividend Appreciation Strategy seeks to realize the combination of a high level of current income and long-term capital appreciation.

It focuses on high-quality US companies with operationally sound business models and favorable long-term fundamental characteristics that have established a long track record of paying sustainable dividends.

The Dividend Appreciation Strategy invests primarily in large cap stocks but may invest in companies across all market capitalizations. The strategy's primary focus is on common stocks.

It may also include selective exposure to other income-oriented asset classes such as:

- Bonds
- Preferred stocks
- Convertible securities

INVESTMENT PROCESS

The Fort Pitt Capital Dividend Appreciation Strategy applies a value conscious investment philosophy and sound time-tested process. We seek to buy well run businesses at stable prices and hold them for at least five years. We generally invest in companies with a stable or growing Return on Equity (ROE). We believe that even the best businesses can sell at a price that make them a bad investment, so we wait, if necessary, until we can buy it at the right price. The strategy is designed to preserve capital in down markets while participating in rising markets to maximize growth and income.
